It is hard to imagine that anyone wouldn't want to read a true story of a young immigrant who left her home in Tibnin, Lebanon, with her two children to be with her husband in Dowagiac, Michigan. Her trip by camel caravan from Tibnin to Beirut was long and hard. In Beirut they boarded a freighter to France. They rode on a train to Cherbourg and were placed in a hotel until the Titanic arrived. The tearful part of the story is that author Joseph L. Thomas' grandmother could neither read, write, nor speak English. The only way she could express where she was going was a piece of paper which read, "Dowagiac, Michigan, U.S.A." She carried that paper all the way to that destination, while experiencing hardships and devastation on the RMS Titanic.

An immigrant from Lebanon, she, in essence, escapes from steerage below decks just before the gates are closed and locked on the doomed vessel, finds room in a lifeboat for herself and her children, and survives to be loved and cherished by her family. These human stories are told with warmth and enthusiasm.

Grandma Survived the Titanic is a true story which, along with its sadness, is also humorous and educational for everyone, regardless of age.
